"All sixteen days between Ghatasthapana and Kojagiri Purnima young girls celebrate the Bhondla/Hadga with gusto. A rangoli, representing a motif of two elephants with garlands in their trunks, is drawn either on the floor or on a paat (low wooden stool). The girls go around the motif in a circle, holding each other's hands and singing the Bhondla songs.

All the Bhondla songs are traditional songs passed down the generations.

Today, however, a very few people have the time for this beautiful tradition, VIIT has been Celebrating this tradition.

Navratri is one the most popular festivals celebrated throughout India. This nine-day long festival is dedicated to Maa Durga.
